COMMUNISTS ARE BELIEVED BACK OF BOMBING PLOT

Postal Inspector Jetchell Assumes Charge of Probe at Easton

A VERY SERIOUS AFFAIR

Devotion of Employees to Duty Cost Two of Them Their Lives

EASTON, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—Communists instead of anti-fascists, investigators asserted today, were behind the bombing plot to snuff out the lives of half a dozen prominent Italians and members of their families in three states and blow up the Argentine Consulate in Baltimore, which was frustrated here yesterday by the vigilance of two postal employees.

Devotion to duty of the latter cost their lives and resulted in the injury of two other employees of the Easton Post Office when one of the infernal machines exploded.

"The plot is more serious than observers are wont to believe," declared one of the investigators as he revealed a meeting had been called today by United States Postal and Secret Service men, Easton authorities, State troopers of Pennsylvania and New Jersey and two bombing experts of the New York Police Department.

Postal Inspector H. L. Jetchell, of Philadelphia, has assumed charge of the probe. He is aided by half a dozen other Federal authorities and more are expected here today. Police Commissioner Mulrooney, of New York, sent Sergeant McCartney and John J. Kennedy of his force here during the night and reported his willingness today to "spend a million dollars" and to send "50 men" if it be to aid in clearing up the various ramifications of the plot. Philadelphia police have been asked to aid in every possible way in running down all clues. In the meantime, descriptions of the three men in a small coupe which carried the deadly parcels to the post office, have been sent to police of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The car is reported to have been olive green in color and to have been almost new or newly painted. Every gasoline attendant within a radius of 50 miles of Easton will be questioned for possible clues in running down the three men.

Nuptials Performed At St. Ann's Church, Here

A wedding took place in St. Ann's Catholic Church, yesterday afternoon, when Miss Anna M. Ferraro, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Ferraro, of 410 Dorance street, became the bride of Frank L. Lili, of 611 Pond street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Marcelino Romagnolo and the wedding mass was played by Miss Frances Tamburella, of Dorance street, organist of the church.

The bride was attended by Miss Carmella Giannacova, of 290 Lafayette street, and the best man was Nicholas Ferraro, brother of the bride, of 410 Dorance street.

The bride was beautifully attired in a gown of white satin fashioned on long, close-fitting lines. The sleeveless bodice featured the round neckline and a belt was worn at the high waistline. Two large rosettes of self material was the only trimming at the waistline in the back. The bridal veil of tulle was cap shape and trimmed with orange blossoms and rhinestones. The long train was finished with a broad band of rose-point lace and each side was edged with narrow lace of the same pattern. She wore white slippers, long white gloves and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies.

The bridesmaid, Miss Giannacova, wore a charming model of silk crepe in Spanish tile tone, fashioned on long, close-fitting lines. The bodice featured the V-shaped neck-line and short sleeves. The bias cut skirt fell in graceful folds. The only trimming on the dress was spray of tiny rosebuds made of self material, which was worn in the back. She wore a felt hat, and satin sandals to match her gown, long white kid gloves and carried a bouquet of roses, the color blending with her gown.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride. There were about 50 guests in attendance, and they were from Bristol and Philadelphia. The bride and groom left last evening for a honeymoon trip to New York City, where they will remain until Sunday. Upon returning, the happy couple will make their home at 611 Pond street.

Mrs. Lili traveled in a brown silk crepe dress trimmed with gold and red, and maroon felt hat.

ARE HELD FOR COURT

LANGHORNE, Dec. 31.—Swooping down on the farm of Peter Pianco, of the Durham Road, yesterday afternoon, Federal agents arrested five men and seized a 1500-gallon still within a few hours after it was placed in operation. The raiders also confiscated 900 empty five-gallon cans.

THE KINDLING TOUCH

The tumult and the shouting which usher the Old Year derisively out and drag the New Year hilariously in it is, after all, only a spent hour of self-abandon. For when the noise has died and the little night is past, the fact remains, and the fact is a milestone set firmly in the fiber of our living journey, and it would come if we slept, or if we kept vigil or, indeed, if we passed into eternity in advance of the event.

If it is fatality we celebrate, whether we recognize it or not; it is human limitation we speed into the night with the old year, knowing that all things are beyond our control; and thus we play the bravo, daring Time to do what he can and will, since the dawn is not of our numbering.

For some the night of capering; for others the morning of reflection. "Resist the beginnings," urges Ovid, but he speaks of temptations. "Those that with haste," remarks Cassius, "while others will make a mighty fire, begin it with weak straws." That is wisdom, and the weak straws of our flame are the gleanings of New Year's Day left from the vanished harvest of the dead year. Spenser was not the first, nor the last, to discover that "each goodly thing is hardest to begin," but there is a quite common discovery that even the weakest of good intentions leaves a reproach among its ruins, and that is something.

Life is a succession of moods, through which we pass again and again; and, according to our character, some grow strong and some more faintly marked as they revolve. The coming of the New Year is of all these moods the most arresting, because it conspires with the seasons to symbolize life itself. He is a bold man who faces shut his ears to the tolling of the funnels this day echoes; he is a foolish man, too, for if the bells monotone their warning they also peal their promise. Who knows of tomorrow? Of another such day, a year hence, and what shall be written? Whether the trail; what the rewards? Somethings stir within as the day glides into the year; and that profound element of high adventure, which shines through the eyes of a boy for whom all the earth awaits a conqueror, flickers, perchance flames, and lights "a candle of understanding in thine heart, which shall not be put out."

Good intentions are not to be despised; they are their own benediction. Not all are wise enough to collect weak straws, but the fault is born of zeal. So long as we ponder the matter and realize, if once a year, that it is even better and more useful to live for good ideals than to die for them, each New Year torch. For these the peal of promise, and the dawn after the night.

SYNOPSIS

Lovely Fanchon Meredith is wanted by the San Francisco police in connection with a murder committed by her sweetheart, "Tony." Fanchon did not know he was a gunman. She escapes by airplane under the name of "Smith." Aboard is Evelyn Howard, whom Fanchon met on a voyage from Hawaii. Evelyn is going to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she never saw. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. To get away from Tony and the past, she goes to the Carstairs home as "Evelyn." A strong bond of affection grows between Mrs. Carstairs and her "niece." Collin Carstairs is at first antagonistic because of his "cousin's" Hawaiian escapades and her self-righteous attitude because of his "cousin's" Hawaiian escapades and her self-righteous attitude when his mother offered aid, but Fanchon's sincerity overcame his objections. They fall in love. After a happy summer at Southampton, Fanchon makes her debut in New York. Collin, though realizing their relationship is a barrier, cannot resist possessing his love. Fanchon cannot acknowledge hers without revealing her identity. A few days later, a threatening note comes from Tony. She visits him.

CHAPTER XVIII

The neighborhood had once been very good, the street was in a jackerway, a small, blind street. It was run down now, the very trees, growing forlornly from the asphalt, and a neglected and pathetic appearance. Children played mildly enough, in the gutter. Women went by, market baskets on their arms. Some were slatternly, some were neat and self-respecting in appearance. Before one house a very fine, expensive car stood, a chair, waiting. As Fanchon hesitated, an elderly woman, wrapped in an ancient mink coat, came down the steps of the house. Evidently she had always lived in the neighborhood and nothing would make her move away, not even the gradual degradation and decay.

Slowly Fanchon went up the brownstone steps. They crumbled a little. The handrail of stone was worn. Shabby, dusty Brussels lace curtains hung at the front windows. She did not know what she would say. She could not know. Her mind was almost blank but of her courage she was certain. Tony—she loved her. Perhaps, still loved her. Possibly within his love for her she might find some core of understanding for her position, some excuse for what she had done. Yet on the other hand, that very understanding and that same love might constitute for her the greatest menace of all.

She put out her slender gloved hand and rang the old-fashioned bell. Tony opened to her. He had been waiting, hidden behind one of those limp curtains.

"Tony—" she said, on a small breath.

Looking at him, she remembered how much, how unthinkingly she had cared. Looking at him with eyes which had looked upon Collin to love him, irrevocably and forever, she felt no stirring of the senses, simply a strange constriction of the heart, in pity for Tony, in pity and compassion for all that had been between them, in pity for the girl she had once been.

He said, evenly:

"You came. Good. We have much to talk about." He took her wrist and drew her gently but relentlessly into the house. "Come," he said, with a flash of his white teeth, "into this—parlor. We shall be undisturbed. Quite alone."

She followed him. The room was long, it was dark, there were velvet overdrapes. On the padded, peeling walls were Victorian era prints, once very gray, now rather dismal looking.

"You no longer care for me," he stated gravely.

ing . . . Stags at bay and curly headed golden haired children at prayer. The furniture was plush, a red. There was a fine mantel. Candelsticks of wood and two couch shells reposed upon it. Beneath it was a gas log, not lighted.

In one corner, a whatnot, loaded with dusty china knicknacks; in the other, a really lovely secretary . . .

a bead curtain divided the room from another room. There was a small square piano, a scarf thrown over it. There were modern student lamps and one oil lamp, in red glass. There was a Rodgers gun and a ladder backed chair and a Morris chair and two pieces of Mission furniture. It was a hodge podge of generations, all of them dusty. It had a strange odor, that room, dust, decay, disinfectant, cabbage boiling and genteel poverty . . . It was incredibly depressing.

"You put his arms around her."

"You are lovelier than ever," he said softly.

There was no shock to her senses in his nearness. Her senses remembered dimly. But love, which had glowed through them was gone. That she experienced no revulsion was merely habit. Her senses might remember but her heart did not; nor yet her mind. She drew herself away, gently.

"Please, Tony," she said.

He placed a chair for her; sat down himself on an Empire sofa, battered, the upholstery threadbare. He stated, gravely:

"You no longer care for me?"

He had explained nothing, as yet. But it was all easier than she had expected. She said, honestly, openly:

"No, Tony."

He spoke without accent. But his gesture was South European. A hand flung, palm up, a shrug of the broad shoulders under the well fitting coat.

"I see. I had expected it. When—when you found out . . . about me?"

"I began," she said, trying to be honest. "I began to stop caring then. It—it was a shock to me. You don't know . . . But . . . I have always appreciated all you did, all you tried to do. And . . . for a little while—" She hesitated and stopped and was amazed to find tears in her eyes. He finished her sentence for her.

"For a little while—we were happy. I see. I would have told you—before. But I was afraid you see," he smiled ruefully, rather charmingly, "you see, I was in love with you, Fanchon."

She started a little at the use of her name. She had not heard it for so long. Tony's keen black eyes narrowed. He went on smoothly.

"And I wanted to marry you. But I was afraid to tell you . . . So I planned instead to make my pile, to turn my last trick, to marry you then and take you away some where and go straight in some place where we could live happily and no one would ever be the wiser, least of all you. But, I didn't turn the trick," he said.

"No."

She looked at him. His ever pallor, that of olive skin, was perceptible. He had grown a little heavier. He looked a little gross. He was no longer clean shaven and wore a small mustache. Yet there was a certain lean hunger in his eyes. His eyes looked sleepless. She began to be afraid. She shook the fear from her.

"Tony, I have brought you your money—all of it," she said . . . and handed him the envelope.

He took it from her. He did not open it. He held it in his hand and regarded it. His face was expressionless. Presently, he put it in a inside pocket.

"You do not need it?" he asked with a most extraordinary formal courtesy—extraordinary under the circumstances.

She shook her head.

"Very well, then. I do. But it will not be enough. I must have more, much more besides. Not for myself alone. But for you also. So that we can both go away and start all over again . . . and you must help me."

Mothers adopt Vick "Colds-Control" Plan

Means Reduction of the Number, Severity and High Costs of the Family's Colds

Doubly welcome to mothers is news that the makers of Vicks VapoRub have perfected a Plan for better "Control-of-Colds"—to lessen the number and severity of colds and reduce their costs in money, lost time and health. The plan is introduced along with Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, based on a new idea for preventing colds—companion product to VapoRub, the modern, external method of treating colds.

HERE, BRIEFLY, IS THE VICK PLAN:

- 1. BEFORE a Cold Starts
When children come in sniffing and sneezing, apply a few Vicks Drops up each nostril. Use the Drops yourself at that first scratchy, sneezy irritation of the nose or upper throat—Nature's warning that you are "catching cold." If you or the children catch cold easily, use the Drops after exposure to any condition you know is apt to be followed by a cold—dry, over-heated rooms—indoor crowds—sudden changes, wet or cold—dust and smoke—etc., etc.—and there is the slightest stuffiness. Used in time, many colds can be avoided.
- 2. AFTER a Cold Starts
At night, massage the throat and chest well with Vicks VapoRub. Spread on thick and cover with warm flannel. Leave bed-clothing loose around the neck so that the medicated vapors arising can be inhaled all night long. During the day—any time, any place—use Vicks Drops as needed for ease and comfort. This gives you full 24-hour treatment—and without the risks of constant internal "dosing," so often upsetting to digestion, especially the delicate digestions of children.

TRIAL OFFER BY LOCAL DRUGGISTS

You have Vicks VapoRub—now get Vicks Nose Drops and use together as directed in the Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds"—to reduce their number and severity. Unless you are delighted with results, your druggist is authorized to refund your money.

SHAMROCKS AND CELTICS TIE FOR FIRST PLACE

By T. M. Juno

The A. O. H. Basketball League went into a deadlock for first place last night as the Shamrocks trounced the Celtics, 38-19. The "Shams" and the "Celts" have each won six and lost three.

In the second fray of the evening, the Gaels continued their drive for first place by copying their fourth straight victory although they had plenty of competition from the last place Columbians. The final count was 27-25.

"Hun" Rodgers and "Ed" Dugan were the leaders in the "Shams" victory, scoring twenty-eight points between them. Mulligan did fine work on the defense.

A belated rally spelled victory for the Gaels in their fray after they had trailed the Columbians throughout. Ennis and Roe were high scorers in their game with fourteen and ten points, respectively. McGinley and Connors played the best game on the defense for their teams.

A TRIBUTE

Commenting editorially upon the death of William F. Brunner, late president of the Paterson Parchment Paper Company, who succumbed at his home in Passaic, N. J., December 17th, The Daily News of that city has the following to say:

WILLIAM F. BRUNNER

William F. Brunner, after a busy day at the Paterson Parchment Paper plant, spent the afternoon buying Christmas gifts, including many baskets of food for those he knew needed them, and in mailing holiday greetings to his friends.

Mr. Brunner was happy. His cheery greetings to those he met were those of a man self evidently at peace in his heart of hearts. He did not know he was going on a long journey. He did not know he never would receive the thanks of those he was remembering, that the packages, the baskets, and the cards would reach their recipients after his own eyes had closed in death.

Would it have made any real difference to Mr. Brunner had he known? We wonder! Would he have dropped his happy task to moan his own fate? Or would he have gone on, happy in the thought that at least there was time for this final service?

William F. Brunner was a man of character. A hard worker, he found time for the fine things of life. Never was he too busy to think of others.

A good man has gone from our midst. Our outstanding thought about him is that he was a happy man and that he contrived in many ways to make others happy with him.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL CODEBODY

THE JUICE OF THE VINE

ON a fine day last month, I stood on a hillside, looking down at a green peaceful valley, and I mused. I have been in the Old World, on the banks of the Rhine. Everywhere I looked there were rows and rows of grape-vines, hung with great purple bunches of Concord grapes or deep red Catawbas.

After I had looked upon the scene, I walked between the vines, and ate all I wanted of the delicious, juicy grapes. Seventy-two varieties of grapes grow in that vineyard, one of the great centers of the grape-juice country, near Naples, New York. The grape-pickers were at work. Each picker had a wooden tray, in which he carefully placed his bunches of grapes. I noticed a few women picking grapes, too, dressed in knickerbockers, with picturesque red bandanas around their necks.

Grape picking begins about the first of September and continues until late in October. In this valley of western New York. The grapes go to a grape juice factory nearby. That factory is one of the cleanest places you can imagine. At the end of the day's work everything is cleaned up, every cloth is washed and hung out in the air. If they weren't careful to clean up as they went, they'd soon have a vinegar factory instead of a grape juice factory, I'm told.

It takes only about one hour to put 1200 gallons of juice through the whole process. The hot, red-purple Concord juice is run into the jug till it overflows, then a worker puts a paraffined cork in place, pounds it down tightly, and pours more hot paraffine over it. The full jugs are stored in cool cellars where they stay till they're shipped or bottled.

Spiced grape juice is a good cold-weather drink—prepare it as our grandmothers made mulled cider—and don't forget to drink it hot.
